

Risk Disclosure

The Client understands that the risk of suffering trading losses may be quite significant. The Client should analyze his financial capabilities before engaging in trading operations.

The Client realizes that he may completely lose his all initial funds and any additional funds used when trading on the market.

The Client agrees that the Company cannot be held responsible for the Client's losses caused, directly or indirectly, by the government restrictions, restrictions of foreign exchange or market rules, suspension of trading, military operations, or other conditions usually called the 'force majeure circumstances' which lie beyond the Company's control.

The Client was informed about additional risks associated with the specifics of functioning of e-trade systems and the problems of Internet communication nodes.

The Client bears full responsibility for the risks associated with the storage of trading account access data, and must ensure that third parties cannot access the trade terminals. The Client's losses and risks associated with the restoration of access to the trading account place no obligations on the Company, other than to provide new access data to the Client upon sufficient and unambiguous identification of the Client as the holder of this account.